BIOGRAPHY

Locke H. Arten is a pompous, well-mannered, middle-aged man who is well-traveled and has a fascination for foreign ranged weaponry. Despite not getting along with people he deems dumber than him (which is most people), he is very reliable and will honor his word. If he says he can get something done, he'll get it done. As a student, he studied in Neverwinter specializing in reading and writing as a scribe.

During his studies, he frequently read old texts regarding foreign military campaigns, taking an interest to the advanced weaponry not common in the Western region of the continent. He was inspired to travel to way. His expeditions in foreign lands and extensive knowledge of ranged weapons molded him into quite the unique ranger, being well-versed in long-ranged weaponry and magic, both of which kept him alive during his travels. He has a particular liking to the advanced gunpowder-based projectiles, having brought (and made himself) some rocket-propelled arrows for his own use. He now travels the world in search of new weapons (and people to sell them to).

From his travels, he has met many different animals, particularly pets. He is quite fond of animals and pets, losing his calm and uptight nature when interacting with a pet.
